The Wright Stuff

A Word from Bob Wright

As we segue to the International Wellness & Research Center from the American Anti-Cancer Institute, we are increasingly reminded of the very large task we face. To Wit: “Your news is coming too late. My oldest granddaughter, age 37, died January 30, 2014. I am losing any confidence I had in cancer fighting and am beginning to believe the industry – for monetary reasons – keeps the cures off the market. Sorry for this attitude. CHG.”

Sadly, CHG is spot-on with his assessment of the conventional cancer industry and, Western Medicine, in general. We are literally watching our parents, brothers, sisters, children and grandchildren perish from a disease that is wholly and entirely treatable at almost any stage. Even more discouraging is the fact that they are dying more often from the treatment that the actual disease itself (or non-disease).

Cancer is a sickness brought on by cellular malfunction – most often created by ourselves. Yes, you and me. If we could ever get the “powers-that-be” (allopaths) to admit this, the mere presence of cancer would immediately begin to wane – then disappear. How is that possible, you ask?

The solution is relatively simple and has been repeated in this forum, books, seminars, Internet chats, etc., for quite some time now. Unfortunately, it has largely fallen on deaf ears or been suppressed by those that have a stake in the status quo of conventional medicine.

Ladies and Gentlemen, we just need to “walk it backwards.” Science refuses to do this. Doctors have no time to listen, and the AMA and FDA are way too busy trying to raid farms that are producing raw milk or organic produce – or trying to put the likes of Dr. Jonathan Wright, Dr. James Forsythe, Maureen Long and other true healing experts out of business and in jail.

No, let’s do the right thing. Let’s “walk it backwards.” Let’s take the manifestation of this cellular malfunction and trace its origin from the point where it now exists to how it began. After all, isn’t this the way that all good research should be carried out? And, when we do this, we mysteriously discover the truth. What we eat, what we drink, what we breathe, what we put on and in our bodies, the environment we live in – all of these with their associated toxins, chemicals and poisons – are the underlying cause that creates the process known as cancer. How do I know this to be true? Simply, because when I “walk it backwards,” I discover the pathways, the internal series of changes, the definitive manner in which cancer originates and proliferates. But this is only the beginning of this “long lost” discovery.

The real proof – and this lies beyond any argument to the contrary – is in the healed bodies of those who have taken their “soon-to-be-dead” diagnosis and brought themselves to full healing. What did they do? They “walked it backwards.” Figuring that if they turned 180 degrees from the proven causative factors – by doing the exact opposite of what generated this monster – and changed how they lived, what they ate and drank, eliminating the chemicals and toxins from their daily regimens, detoxifying the poisons that had been residing in their cells, tissues and livers for years, supplementing with over-the-top organic nutrition, and drank the right fluids and water – that they would heal. Well, guess what? They did. And, surprisingly to many, it happens every day in our country. Every day! And, most Americans don’t even know it.

So, “walk it backwards” friends. Whether you have cancer or not; with diabetes, arthritis, heart disease, auto-immune disease, ADHD, etc. – it literally makes no difference. It’s all immune related. Heal the human immune system and it will heal almost any malady known to man. To mimic the mantra permeating our society today, “change your immune system, change your life.” While many will want to argue with this assessment and state emphatically that it’s not that simple, they would be wrong. Simple? Yes. Easy? For some – not so much. But, doable? Most certainly. But, you gotta want it.

I would like to think that I would do just about anything to heal myself if stricken with cancer. Some things might not be so easy for many, however. If you have been living on a sugar-filled, fast food diet for the last 30 years, it may be somewhat difficult for you to adapt to a largely vegan and raw food plan that is fundamentally necessary for immune healing. Nonetheless, it is a requirement for the terminally ill. Folks, after some fashion, we’re all terminally ill and will leave these aging bodies at some point. Why not, though, have a great quality of life for the time we have – whether that is 60 years or 100? That gets my vote.

I have children and grandchildren like the gentleman in the testimonial above. I desire to live long – but not to outlive them. We live in a time now where many of us will, in fact, outlive our children. It’s time to do something about that.

“Fluoride Literally Turns the Pineal Gland to Stone, Research Suggests”

By Sayer Ji, Founder, GreenMedInfo, LLC

The pineal gland has been known as the 'seat of soul' for hundreds of years. Could fluoride, a ubiquitous vector of toxicity in the modern world, actually be calcifying this gland and literally turning it to stone?

The Discovery

Research published in 2001 showed that fluoride (F) deposits in the pineal gland with age and is associated with enhanced gland calcification. Eleven aged cadavers were dissected and their pineal glands assayed:

"There was a positive correlation between pineal F[luoride] and pineal Ca[lcium] (r = 0.73, p<0.02) but no correlation between pineal F and bone F. By old age, the pineal gland has readily accumulated F and its F/Ca ratio is higher than bone."

This is the not the first research to implicate fluoride in contributing to so-called ectopic calcification, or the calcification of soft tissue. We address this in a previous report on the potential for fluoride to calcify the arteries.
What Is The Pineal Gland?

The pineal gland is a small endocrine gland in the vertebrate brain, and is sometimes called the "third eye" as it is a light sensitive, centrally-located organ with cellular features resembling the human retina.

One article describes the role of the pineal gland in more technical terms here:

"The role of the nonvisual photoreception is to synchronize periodic functions of living organisms to the environmental light periods in order to help survival of various species in different biotopes." [Source]

The pineal gland is best known for its role in producing the hormone melatonin from serotonin (triggered by the absence of light) and affects wake/sleep patterns and seasonal/circadian rhythms. Like a tiny pea-sized pine cone it is located near the center of the brain, between the two hemispheres and is a unique brain structure insofar as it is not protected by the blood-brain-barrier. This may also explain why it is uniquely sensitive to calcification via fluoride exposure.

More Than An Endocrine Gland

Technically the mammalian pineal gland is neural tissue, and the cells within the pineal gland - the pinealocytes - have characteristics that resemble the photoreceptor cells in the retina.

This has given rise to the opinion that it should be reclassified:

"In our opinion, the main trend of today's literature on pineal functions--only considering the organ as a common endocrine gland--deviates from this structural and histochemical basis." [Source]

The pineal gland has been a subject of much interest since ancient times. Galen described it in the 3rd century, and the philosopher René Decartes (1596-1650) identified the pineal gland as the "seat of the soul." His explanation for this conclusion is quite interesting:

"My view is that this gland is the principal seat of the soul, and the place in which all our thoughts are formed. The reason I believe this is that I cannot find any part of the brain, except this, which is not double. Since we see only one thing with two eyes, and hear only one voice with two ears, and in short have never more than one thought at a time, it must necessarily be the case that the impressions which enter by the two eyes or by the two ears, and so on, unite with each other in some part of the body before being considered by the soul. Now it is impossible to find any such place in the whole head except this gland; moreover it is situated in the most suitable possible place for this purpose, in the middle of all the concavities; and it is supported and surrounded by the little branches of the carotid arteries which bring the spirits into the brain."[Source]

Decartes was one of the few philosophers who was experienced in vivisection and anatomy, and who rightly pointed out the unique nature of the pineal gland's location in the brain and blood supply.

The "third eye" is also a well-known symbol in Eastern literature, and may be concretely grounded in the anatomical structure and function of the pineal gland.

Calcium Stones In The Brain

Pineal gland calcifications upon dissection resemble gravel, and are composed of calcite (calcium carbonate) and/or calcium hydroxylapatite, the latter of which is not unlike dentin or bone. [Source]

Pineal gland calcification is associated with a number of diseases in the medical literature:

1. Alzheimer Disease
2. Bipolar Disease
3. Circadian Dysregulation
4. Hormone Imbalances: Low Melatonin
5. Insomnia

Fluoride As A "Therapeutic" Neurotoxin?

Now that it has been established that fluoride (F) exposure contributes to the calcification of the pineal gland, the question remains: what are the subjective effects of these tissue changes to those who undergo them?

Prozac may represent an archetypal example of how fluoride affects the personality/soul. This drug (chemical name fluoxetine) is approximately 30% fluoride by weight and marketed as an "antidepressant," even while a major side effect of its use and/or withdrawal is suicidal depression. Modern psychiatry often treats depressive disorders - the "dark night of the soul" - as an organic disorder of the brain, targeting serotonin reuptake by any chemical means necessary. Fluoride and fluoxetine, in fact, may accomplish their intended "therapeutic effects" by poisoning the pineal gland. Animal studies confirm that when mice have their pineal glands removed they no longer respond to fluoxetine. [Source]

Perhaps the primary reason why Prozac causes a favorable reaction in those who are treated (poisoned) with it, is that it disassociates that person from the psychospiritual conflicts that they must normally suppress in order to maintain the appearance of sanity and functionality in society, i.e. it is control and not health that is the goal of such "treatment."

If Prozac and other sources of fluoride in our environment deposit within the pineal gland, accelerating the transformation of functional pineal tissue into calcification, is it possible that it works by dehumanizing and flattening the effect of those who are under its influence?

How Do We Prevent Pineal Gland Calcification?

Eliminating exposure to fluoride is the #1 priority. We can start by being careful about surreptitious forms of fluoride in Teflon, foods and beverages produced with municipal water, tap water, infant formula, fluoride-containing drugs like Prozac, toothpaste, etc. We have collected a number of studies from the US National Library of Medicine on natural substances which mitigate fluoride toxicity. We also have a section on our database dedicated to finding substances which prevent or reverse other forms of pathological calcification which may have relevance for pineal gland calcification, such as ectopic calcification. Lastly, there is research on the potential value of magnesium and phytate in reducing pineal gland calcification.

Fluoride has a wide range of adverse effects. We have indexed over 60 diseases linked to this ubiquitous toxicant on the GreenMedInfo database. But based on the research presented here one new way of describing its adverse effects is as a "calcifier of the soul."

“Call for Testimonies”

For those of you have been blessed to survive cancer – we need your testimony. Of course, there are some – we must admit – who survived despite many rounds of chemotherapy and/or radiation. We are sincerely glad you made it. But you know, most cancer survivors who journeyed through allopathic medicine and managed to get beyond that golden five-year deadline did so despite being inundated with some of the most deadly drugs known to man. Even though some seem to have escaped the “Big C,” the long-term prognosis is not so bright for many. Those who end up living long and having a good quality of life are those who change the way they live.

They don’t go back to the soda pop, white bread, and sugar. Gone are the chemical-laden packaged goods and fast food (fast food is not really food, folks!). If you haven’t heard me say it before, please listen up. Eat nothing that is first passed through a window. Got it?

In the final analysis, real survivors get back to the basics. That includes an alkaline diet, organic raw fruits and vegetables, meat (for some) that is not loaded with hormones and who knows what else, and good water – lots of it.
We are looking for your testimony if you have survived cancer by what we would call natural means. We want to know what you did – and how you did it. What was your initial diagnosis and prognosis? Was a doctor involved and to what degree? Just cover the basics in about a page or two and forward it off to us. With your permission, we may use it in future editions of this newsletter or in a future edition of “Killing Cancer – Not People” or another written work. Let us know if it’s O.K. to use your real name – or if you want it changed. We will comply with your wishes.

For those of you who have read the previously mentioned book – we are also requesting immediate feedback on how you liked it. If you thought it was great, please let us know in written form. On the other hand, if you didn’t like it, feel free to say so and tell us why (be at least somewhat nice, please!). Obviously, we are looking for good reviews to include in the next edition – if you are so inclined.

Please forward both testimonies and book feedback to our email address: info@americanaci.org. You just might be in the next book!

“Huge Victory for Natural Medicine in Australia”

(Natural News) Australia is one of the most oppressive medical police state regimes in the world. The medical tyranny in Australia has even led to the government denying entitlement checks to parents who refuse to have their children subjected to an endless battery of dangerous vaccine injections. Deranged pharma trolls in Australia have been pushing hard to outlaw herbal medicine and force all the citizens of Australia to use toxic, overpriced chemical prescription medications to treat everything.

Jon Rappoport from NoMoreFakeNews.com cites Crazz Files, reporting that the Australian government has rejected the pharma-funded attempt to outlaw natural medicine, reaffirming the efficacy of traditional remedies. This is a surprising and important win for health freedom in Australia, and it reveals that even the “Greens” party in Australia has somewhat become anti-natural medicine.

“AACI partners with Nspire”

The AACI is proud to partner with Nspire and their Cherish™ Brand sanitary pads and panty liners that we believe will dramatically impact the health of women of ALL ages.

Our “Now We NO!” mission is to educate and empower women to learn about the toxic, deadly chemicals that are in their feminine hygiene products and to say “NO!” to the products they have been using AND find healthy solutions!

The Dioxin that is in most of the brand name sanitary pads is a chemical that has been directly related to birth defects, hormonal imbalance, infertility, cancer, fibroid tumors, ovarian cysts, yeast and urinary infections, and so much more! Small exposures to this chemical affect our bodies in different ways, but the end result is always some sort of health issue! OUR goal is to make sure this next generation of girls never experience what we have over the past 20+ years!
Cherish™ Brand non-toxic sanitary pads provide dryness, comfort and protection. The first layer is 100% pure cotton. Most top brands use synthetic petrochemical materials that may irritate sensitive skin and cause discomfort. Also, they do not let the skin breathe, which increases the risk of bacteria growth. Cherish™ Brand sanitary napkins include negative ion technology which has been proven to balance pH and hormone levels, protect against germs and bacteria, reduce inflammation, fight against vaginal irritations and infections, and reduce unwanted odor. Far-Infrared technology has also been added to help balance pH and boost the immune system along with Nano-Silver to help eliminate bacteria, AND the Cherish™ pad is ten times more absorbent than traditional pads.

Check out this amazing testimony: “Cherish has been an answer to my prayers. From the time I started my period at age 9, I’ve always had horribly painful periods which have gotten worse over the years. I don’t know how these pads work, but I do know that since I started using them my excruciating painful cramps are GONE! Plus, the pads are so soft and keep me dry! I no longer get the post-period rash—to top it all off, my period is 2-3 days shorter than usual since switching to the Cherish pads!”

A financial service for using life insurance today™

For millions of people who are living with a serious illness such as cancer, heart disease, Alzheimer’s or AIDS, the high cost of medical care can quickly deplete essential resources. The same is true for many people over the age of 75 who have complicating health factors. Just putting money aside for basic expenses such as groceries and mortgage payments can be a challenge. LIBI gives people a place to turn for additional resources. Through a financial service called a viatical settlement, we enable people to sell their current life insurance policies for a percentage of the total face value.
