Now, this is important for a number of reasons and will have the ability to stretch across the entire “natural” health community. You remember – that group of individuals and businesses that have been striving for decades to be heard and hold the real tenants of healing – and prevention. Yes, that one. The community (or industry) that really means it when they sign up for “first, do no harm.” Those that embrace what God originally gave us to keep us well, and to heal us when we are not. Sure, this is really strange and off-the-wall stuff. Like organic food, pure water, plants and detoxification methods that work at the cellular level. Strange, indeed.

I think you get it. If there is one thing that this ever-growing group of people lack – it is money. No question. The allopathic community doesn’t suffer here – they just don’t know what to do with it to move our nation (and world) off the “sick care” wagon and onto the true “health care” and prevention vehicle. We know – and it’s high time that everyone does. We don’t need to eternally treat and manage symptoms. That current model is steeped in power and money but does very little good for all of us – except, of course, in the areas of trauma and necessary surgeries. We are thankful for the doctors and hospital workers who are immeasurably skilled in these modalities.

At the American Anti-Cancer Institute (becoming the International Wellness & Research Center), we envision a way forward – not just for us – but for everyone who embraces natural healing and the real cure – prevention. To that end, funding means several things to us. We will be finally able to pursue and finish our PrimaNeuvera, the tried and proven plant extract from South America. We sincerely hope that “south of the border” availability will commence within 120 days or so from grant reception. Our 100-acre dream (already pre-designed) World Campus, complete with a University, massive grow domes and fields of organic produce, Wellness Center, Co-op, Outpatient Center, Sports/Rehabilitation/Activity Center, Health Club, Worship Center, etc., can finally become reality. Satellite wellness centers and regional ambassador centers throughout the U.S. and overseas are in the works. Product development and many research programs are on the docket for immediate commencement.

We will offer an active and ongoing grant program for those individuals and businesses that qualify and scholarships to our wellness centers for those who simply can’t afford to do the things that will bring their sick and diseased bodies to healing. Exciting time? I think so.

In the final analysis, I truly believe that we have a significant opportunity here to literally change the face of health and wellness in this world. Although a staggering challenge, it is entirely doable with the right people, a comprehensive strategic plan, a mission that supports all individuals – regardless of finances, and the funding that makes it all possible.

You see, while some might have thought that we were coasting (of course, we never were), we have been deep in the search for the resources that would allow us to fulfill this quest towards an epic paradigm shift of an unparalleled magnitude. I know, some of you are thinking, “right, Bob.” Well, as I have said in my book and continue to say all the time, “the proof is in the pudding.” Thanks, again, to my Great Hekawi Grandmother for that (read the book). You can choose to wait and see or to reach out and help us along the way – in any way, shape or form that your expertise lies.

Regardless, I truly believe we are on our way. We have been working all over the world, establishing friends and contacts that will become a part of this quest. We are very active through several international ambassadors in SE Asia as we speak. The healing stories coming out of that area of the world are incredible and inspiring. We have four regional ambassadors and several state ambassadors that are active in the U.S.
right now. We will grow this shortly. We plan for healing retreats in addition to our wellness centers throughout the world. We are working (and have been) to establish insurance that will cover natural medicine (that would be a first). We have an Advisory Board of many different exceptional and well-known Doctors and Researchers and will add to it in the coming year.

We are an IRS-designated 501©(3) and are responsible to the people of our country for every dime we spend. There are no extravagant salaries here – nor will there be. Having said that, we believe that a worker is worthy of his/her wages. Speaking of “worthy,” there will be no pouring of donations into that huge, ominous, dark, sucking hole called “cancer research,” – never to be seen or heard from again. No, every dollar we invest in real research will be used to prove what really works – and what doesn’t – sans the “side effects” and all the usual accompanying baloney. We are not looking for another drug that will benefit us in the billions (sound familiar). Instead, we will seek the answers that one’s own body will use to overcome the challenges that increasingly haunt us today; Type 1 Diabetes (Type 2 is easy – we can already do that), autoimmune disease (already answers here, too); neuro-degenerative disease (making great strides currently); heart disease, Lyme Disease and, of course, cancer.

Here at the AACI/IWARC, we continue to help people daily. Literally thousands of people’s lives have been changed because of what we do here. How do we know that? They tell us so. The greatly expanded Third Edition of Killing Cancer – Not People, has become a cancer “Bible” for so many. We counsel cancer sufferers constantly with the real truth about what this “dis-ease” really is and how one’s own immune system can conquer it – even in late stages.

I urge you to get involved – at whatever level suits you. Whether you have hopes of becoming an employee, volunteer, ambassador, donor – or whatever you envision, think about joining us as we begin our giant leap into the future. A future that changes us all forever.

And, when December rolls around and you break out the checkbook and are ready to do the customary thing (writing a check to the American Cancer Society or Susan G. Komen) – defy Nike’s tag phrase and just DON’T do it! Instead, invest those dollars where they will do the most good. And, if you didn’t know where that was, now you do.

As we step into the next phase of health and wellness, I wish all of our readers health and healing and Godspeed. Blessings!

Baking Soda for Kidney Disease
By Cherie Calbom, “The International Juice Lady”

Sodium bicarbonate is not only an excellent agent for natural chemotherapy, bringing as it does higher O2 levels through increased alkalinity to the cells, it is also one of the most basic medicines we have for kidney disease. New research by British scientists at the Royal London Hospital shows that sodium bicarbonate can dramatically slow the progress of chronic kidney disease.[1]

Bicarbonate acts to stimulate the ATPase by acting directly on it.[2] The simple household product used for baking, cleaning, bee stings, treating asthma, cancer and acid indigestion is so effective in treating kidney disease that it prevents patients from having to be put on kidney machines. The findings have been published in the Journal of the American Society of Nephrology. Bicarbonate is a truly strong universal concentrated nutritional medicine that works effectively in many clinical situations that we would not normally think of. It is a prime emergency room and intensive care medicine that can save a person’s life in a heartbeat and it is also a supermarket item that you can take right off the shelf and use for more things than one can imagine.
Dr. S.K. Hariachar, a nephrologist who oversees the Renal Hypertension Unit in Tampa Florida stated, upon seeing the research on bicarbonate and kidney disease, “I am glad to see confirmation of what we have known for so long. I have been treating my patients with bicarbonate for many years in attempts to delay the need for dialysis, and now we finally have a legitimate study to back us up. Not only that, we have the added information that some people already on dialysis can reverse their condition with the use of sodium bicarbonate”.

Dose used to slow the rate of kidney decline in patients with CKD

Approx. 600 mg baking soda three times daily given orally in tablet form (increased as necessary to achieve and maintain blood levels) – 600 mg is equivalent to ~ ¼ teaspoon baking soda powder, which can be taken dissolved in a small glass of water or juice for consumption.

Fruits and vegetables improve your kidney function. Such fruits include grapes, cranberries and blueberries; vegetables include fennel, onions, celery, beets, spinach, string beans and asparagus. If you are suffering from kidney disease, make sure the fruits and vegetables you eat are low in potassium.

Turmeric’s ‘Smart Kill’ Properties Put Chemo and Radiation to Shame

My friend, Sayer Ji of GreenMedinfo, recently published the following article regarding more of the amazing properties of turmeric. It appears that there is almost nothing (regarding health and healing) that it can’t do. We have talked a lot recently about cancer stem cells and the inability of chemo and radiation to affect them at all. This study solidifies the fact that turmeric is far, far better as a chemotherapeutic or radiologic agent than the chemo and radiation themselves – with no side or bad effects! Think about it.

The ancient Indian spice turmeric strikes again! A new study finds turmeric extract selectively and safely killing cancer stem cells in a way that chemo and radiation cannot.

A groundbreaking new study published in the journal Anticancer Research reveals that one of the world's most extensively researched and promising natural compounds for cancer treatment: the primary polyphenol in the ancient spice turmeric known as curcumin, has the ability to selectively target cancer stem cells, which are at the root of cancer malignancy, while having little to no toxicity on normal stem cells, which are essential for tissue regeneration and longevity.

Titled, "Curcumin and Cancer Stem Cells: Curcumin Has Asymmetrical Effects on Cancer and Normal Stem Cells," the study describes the wide range of molecular mechanisms presently identified by which curcumin attacks cancer stem cells (CSCs), which are the minority subpopulation of self-renewing cells within a tumor colony, and which alone are capable of producing all the other cells within a tumor, making them the most lethal, tumorigenic of all cells within most if not all cancers. Because CSCs are resistant to chemotherapy, radiation, and may even be provoked towards increased invasiveness through surgical intervention, they are widely believed to be responsible for tumor recurrence and the failure of conventional treatment.

The study identified the following 8 molecular mechanisms by which curcumin targets and kills cancer stem cells:

- Down-regulation of interleukin-6 (IL-6): IL-6 is classified as a cytokine (a potent biomolecule released by the immune system) and modulates both immunity and inflammation. It's over expression has been linked to the progression from inflammation to cancer. Curcumin inhibits IL-6 release, which in turn prevents CSC stimulation.

- Down-regulation of interleukin-8 (IL-8): IL-8, another cytokine, is released after tumor cell death, subsequently stimulating CSCs to regrow the tumor and resist chemotherapy. Curcumin both inhibits IL-8 production directly and indirectly.

- Down-regulation of interleukin-1 (IL-1): IL-1, a family of cytokines, are involved in response to injury and infection, with IL-1β playing a key role in cancer cell growth and the stimulation of CSCs. Curcumin inhibits IL-1 both directly and indirectly.
• Decrease CXCR1 and CXCR2 binding: CXCR1 and CXCR2 are proteins expressed on cells, including CSCs, which respond to the aforementioned cytokines in a deleterious manner. Curcumin has been found to not only block cytokine release, but their binding to these two cellular targets.

• Modulation of the Wnt signaling pathway: The Wnt signaling pathway regulates a wide range of processes during embryonic development, but are also dysregulated in cancer. Curcumin has been found to have a corrective action on Wnt signaling.

• Modulation of the Notch Pathway: The Notch signaling pathway, also involved in embryogenesis, plays a key role in regulating cell differentiation, proliferation and programmed cell death (apoptosis), as well as the functioning of normal stem cells. Aberrant Notch signaling has been implicated in a wide range of cancers. Curcumin has been found to suppress tumor cells along the Notch pathway.

• Modulation of the Hedgehog Pathways: Another pathway involved in embryogenesis, the Hedgehog pathway also regulates normal stem cell activity. Abnormal functioning of this pathway is implicated in a wide range of cancers and in the stimulation of CSCs and associated increases in tumor recurrence after conventional treatment. Curcumin has been found to inhibit the Hedgehog pathway through a number of different mechanisms.

• Modulation of the FAK/AKT/FOXo3A Pathway: This pathway plays a key role in regulating normal stem cells, with aberrant signaling stimulating CSCs, resulting once again in tumor recurrence and resistance to chemotherapy. Curcumin has been found in multiple studies to destroy CSCs through inhibiting this pathway.

As you can see through these eight examples above, curcumin exhibits a rather profound level of complexity, modulating numerous molecular pathways simultaneously. Conventional cytotoxic chemotherapy is incapable of such delicate and "intelligent" behavior, as it preferentially targets fast-replicating cells by damaging their DNA in the vulnerable mitosis stage of cell division, regardless of whether they are benign, healthy or cancerous cells. Curcumin's selective cytotoxicity, on the other hand, targets the most dangerous cells – the cancer stem cells – which leaving unharmed the normal cells, as we will now learn more about below.

Curcumin and Normal Stem Cells

Normal stem cells (NSCs) are essential for health because they are responsible for differentiating into normal cells that are needed to replace damaged or sick ones. If curcumin were to kill normal cells, like radiation and chemotherapy, it would not provide a compelling alternative to these treatments. The study addressed this point:

"The safety of curcumin has been long established, as it has been used for centuries as a dietary spice. The question arises as to why curcumin does not seem to have the same deleterious effects on normal stem cells (NSCs) as it does on CSCs. There are several possible reasons that curcumin has toxic effects on CSCs, while sparing NSCs."

The study offered three potential explanations for curcumin's differential or selective cytotoxicity:

- Malignant cells take in much more curcumin than normal cells.
- Curcumin alters the microenvironment of cells in such a way that is adverse to CSCs and beneficial to NSCs.
- Curcumin may not only directly attack CSCs, but may encourage them to differentiate into non-lethal, more benign cells.
Concluding Remarks

This study adds growing support to the idea that safe, time-tested, natural substances are superior to synthetic ones. Given the evidence that a safe and effective alternative may already exist, chemotherapy, radiation and even surgery may no longer be justified as the first-line standard of care for cancer treatment. In fact, a significant body of evidence now implicates these treatments in worsening prognosis, and in some cases driving cancer stem cell enrichment in tumors. Radiotherapy, for instance, has been found to induce cancer stem cell like properties in breast cancer cells, essentially increasing their malignancy and tumorigenicity by 30 fold. This is hardly progress when one considers the role that CSCs play, especially in contributing to post-treatment secondary cancers.

Turmeric and its components, of course, are not FDA approved drugs, and by definition the FDA will not allow an unapproved substance, natural or synthetic, to prevent, treat, diagnosis or cure a disease. This means that you will not be seeing it offered by an oncologist as an alternative to chemotherapy or radiation any time soon. This does not, however, mean that it does not work. We have gathered over 1500 citations from the National Library of Medicine's bibliographic database MEDLINE, accessible through pubmed.gov, and which can be viewed on our database here: Turmeric Research, showing that curcumin and related turmeric components possess significant anti-cancer activity. Truth be told, the information is so extensive, revealing over 700 possible health benefits, that I believe this plant embodies a form of intelligence and even compassion. You can learn more about this supposition here: Turmeric's Healing Power: A Physical Manifestation of Compassion? I also discuss this concept in my lecture, Food As Medicine Rebooted, which you can watch here.
Of course, the point is not to wait until one has such a severe health problem that taking heroic doses of spices or herbs becomes the focus. It is important to remember that ancient cultures used spices like turmeric mainly in culinary doses, as part of their dietary practices. These smaller amounts, delivered mainly as whole food extracts, likely constituted effective preventive strategies – perhaps preventing the need for radical, heroic intervention later in life. If you read our previous article, Turmeric: A Wellness Promoting Tonic at Low Doses, Research Reveals (available here), you'll see this point explored in greater depth in light of a human clinical study.

After examination in July 2015, Mr. Chieng was CLEARED of Prostate Cancer stage 4 & cancers spread to lymphoma nodes at the spine.

Cervix cell abnormality/Mild Dyskaryosis

Patient Name: Naomi from England
Occupation: Emergency medical officer

Diagnosed/Date:
Cervical Dyskaryosis/Sept. 17th, 2014

Cervical Dyskaryosis indicates the existence of pre-cancerous cells that can lead to cervical cancer. These abnormal, dangerous cells were widespread and covered 80% of the cervix.

Medical Treatment recommended:
Treatment can vary depending on severity. Often, laser removal is used, burning the affected cells away. A cone biopsy, where part of the cervix is removed, can be recommended if the cells have penetrated beyond the surface. The patient was advised to undergo Laser treatment (refer medical report 09/17/2014).

Natural diet:
Instead of Laser treatment, American Anti-Cancer Institute (AACI) Ambassador John Lim recommended drinking 3-4 liters per day of Enagic medical grade Ionized Alkaline Kangen water pH 9.5. The patient followed the recommendation diligently for less than 3 weeks (07/27/2015-08/14/2015).

Results:
Follow-up colposcopy performed on 08/14/2015: results show cervical dyskaryosis/abnormal pre-cancerous cells were cleared and no longer cover the cervical surface. Naomi no longer required any laser treatment. Naomi dedicated the healing to Enagic Kangen water because it was the only diet changes made since 07/27/15. ♦
Lyme Disease

It seems that Lyme disease is reaching epidemic levels in our country today. And, it is being caught late by physicians as they are misdiagnosing it as Fibromyalgia, Lupus, MS, or rheumatoid arthritis.

To be fair, it is hard to diagnose as the Lyme spirochetes (bacterial form of the disease) are almost as small as a virus. Nevertheless, the conventional treatments involve drugs, drugs, and more drugs. I recently watched a friend of the family die tortuously over a 5-6 year period with this sickness. Of course, the drugs were her downfall. If she had done nothing she would still be alive today. Ultimately, the pharmaceuticals (not the bacteria) produced weeping holes in her head and her bones became so soft and porous that her hips collapsed. She didn’t last too long after that.

Friends, put this in your memory bank. IONIC SILVER kills virtually every pathogen known to man. Period. And that includes Lyme bacteria. It may take quite a bit of it over a 3-4 month regimen – but it works. The silver suffocates these bad guys and puts them out of business. Colloidal silver will work – to a degree – but not as well. Sometimes the particles fall out of solution and, the fact is, that they (the silver colloid particles) are just too big to fit in the smallest capillaries. The spirochetes love to hide in every tiny crevice they can find within the body. The silver must be able to reach them. Ionic silver is at least 10 times smaller than the colloidal silver – enabling it to get into the smallest blood vessels.

To acquire the silver contact us here at the AACI or go directly to our good friend CJ Coston at the Eutrophean Health Institute at 877-487-3083 or 719-487-3083.

Testimonial on Killing Cancer – Not People

Brilliant! Thanks Bob. I currently have a few friends suffering from cancer – also just lost a lifelong friend as well as my father a few years back. If I knew then what I know now I think they would still be with us (thanks to the book). The difficulty I’m facing with my current friends is changing their attitudes/mind-set and to embrace other ways of tackling the disease. Such is the grip allopathic medicine has over our train of thought, and the ‘well-meaning’ but largely blinkered views of some doctors. This book has given me the passion to fight back against this disease by spreading the word, instead of just accepting its conclusion. So, thanks again!

Take care and best wishes,

Jamie
